

Full Report Zongyi HE

Grade Grade 4
Class Teacher Mark DAVIES

This report reflects the above named Student's performance in each of their subjects during their third Term. Academic Momentum, Effort and Conduct grades are awarded on a non-sequential scale (Exemplary, Meeting expectation, Below expectation, Cause for concern).

Detailed explanations of the grades awarded (including individual grade descriptors) can be found in the letter accompanying this Full Report.

Zongyi has a flair and has demonstrated exceptional talent in Mathematics this year and consistently performs to a very high standard across all areas of the curriculum. He has an excellent understanding of mathematical concepts and is able to apply his knowledge quickly, accurately and with great confidence. Zongyi approaches challenges enthusiastically and often shows advanced reasoning skills when solving complex problems. He has shown outstanding understanding of place value to a million and works confidently with large numbers in a variety of contexts. In calculation work, he is highly accurate and efficient when multiplying multi-digit numbers, often using mental strategies alongside formal methods. His understanding of proper and improper fractions is extremely secure, and he is able to explain his thinking clearly using precise mathematical vocabulary. Zongyi also excels in geometry and problem-solving, where he demonstrates logical thinking, resilience and creativity in his approach. He is able to identify patterns, explain strategies and justify his answers with maturity and confidence. Zongyi is a highly capable mathematician who consistently strives for excellence and should be extremely proud of his achievements this year. Moving forward, extend your problem-solving skills by tackling multi-step and non-routine problems, explaining reasoning clearly and systematically.

Zongyi has had an outstanding year in Science, consistently demonstrating exceptional understanding and a highly thoughtful approach to learning. He engages deeply with concepts across topics such as forces, materials and chemical reactions, applying his knowledge with precision in both practical and written contexts. Zongyi shows excellent analytical thinking when interpreting results and is able to make clear, well-reasoned connections between ideas. He is an extremely polite, respectful and dependable member of the class, and his positive attitude makes him a real asset to the learning environment. As he moves into Grade 5, continuing to extend his thinking through independent enquiry, including designing investigations and evaluating the reliability of results, will further develop his already advanced scientific skill set.

Throughout this school year, Zongyi has shown a highly responsible attitude, taking his classroom tasks and homework seriously. With some encouragement, he is willing to join in class discussions, and I hope to see him become even more confident when sharing his ideas. While Zongyi has a good understanding of the texts we study, he is encouraged to be more precise when explaining how certain words are used and the purpose of key sentences. By focusing on key points and practising critical thinking, he can gradually move toward independent analysis. In terms of speaking, he expresses himself clearly, but he should aim to use more formal language instead of casual phrases, while keeping his ideas logical and well-organised. Regarding his writing, Zongyi's work is well-structured, but he can improve further by using a richer and more varied vocabulary. As a next step, Zongyi is encouraged to do more reading outside of class. By recording and collecting new words, he will find it easier to express himself and avoid difficulties with writing specific Chinese characters from memory in his future work.

	Topic		Mark DAVIES

Zongyi has shown a fantastic interest in our Topic lessons this year and has contributed thoughtfully during class discussions. He developed an excellent understanding of life in the 1800s and the Victorian Age, particularly when comparing how people lived and worked during this period to modern life today. He also demonstrated curiosity when learning about the Industrial Revolution and was able to explain how new inventions changed industry and society. This was highlighted during the exhibition where Zongyii's group produced a fantastic product for cleaning up our seas and oceans, showing creativity, teamwork and a strong understanding of the design process. In our India unit, he enjoyed exploring the country's culture, geography and traditions and showed respect and interest when sharing ideas with others. During our work on rivers, he confidently identified the features of rivers and understood the importance of rivers to both people and the environment. Zongyii approaches his learning with enthusiasm and works perfectly both independently and as part of a group. Moving forward, Zongyi can continue to develop analytical thinking and support ideas with evidence.

Zongyi has taken a sensible and thoughtful approach to Art & Design this year and has demonstrated pleasing improvement across all three units as his confidence and technical understanding have grown. His bamboo painting showed a developing grasp of brushwork, composition and the expressive traditions of the art form, and his personal chop reflected careful engagement with each stage of the Design Cycle. In the mechanisms unit, he produced a fairground ride that demonstrated growing practical skill and creative thought, and his Lippan-inspired relief reflected a steady and improving ability to work with a range of materials and techniques. He responds well to feedback and approaches his work with a reliable and cooperative attitude. Continuing to embrace creative risk-taking and experimentation will be the most valuable next step in supporting his further artistic development.

Zongyi has worked consistently well in Computer Science and has developed good technical knowledge throughout the year. During our Tynker unit, he created successful coding projects using sequencing, repetition, and animation features. He is developing confidence when debugging and improving his work. During our Micro:bit lessons, he demonstrated a clear understanding of programming concepts such as variables, inputs, and outputs. He worked well during the Tinkercad design project and created a thoughtful prototype linked to the Sustainable Development Goals. In Term 3, he showed good understanding when working with spreadsheets and was able to organise data, create graphs, and use formulas with support. He particularly enjoyed our Dash and Dot robotics lessons and worked well to program simple tasks. He has had a positive year and should continue to challenge himself further.

	Drama		Mark DAVIES

Zongyi has become more confident in Drama and has demonstrated significant strengths in his Drama studies this year, particularly through his empathetic approach to character development and relationship dynamics. He skilfully considers different perspectives and effectively challenges stereotypes, which adds depth and authenticity to his performances. A particularly strong example of this was his portrayal of Beowulf, where he used body language and facial expression with impressive attention to detail to communicate emotion and character. He has also shown confidence when performing in front of others, using clear projection and effective intonation to engage his audience. These skills have been especially evident during our work on Shakespeare, where he explored and interpreted themes, characters and language thoughtfully. He approaches drama activities with maturity and creativity and is always willing to immerse himself fully in performance tasks. Moving forward, experiment with different accents, pitches, and pauses to add layers to character dialogue.

Zongyi has made very good progress this year, particularly considering that it took him a little longer than expected to become comfortable with the trumpet at the start. Since then, he has developed well and is now able to play all the notes that have been taught with increasing confidence. One area for further development is his notation fluency, particularly when reading and responding at pace. With continued regular practice, this will become more secure and support greater accuracy and confidence in his playing. I look forward to seeing his continued progress in Grade 5.

Zongyi has demonstrated excellent skill and understanding throughout the invasion games unit. He consistently applies attacking and defending strategies effectively and shows strong awareness of space, positioning, and teamwork during games. Zongyi's positive attitude, sportsmanship, and ability to encourage others make him a valuable member of any team. He participates confidently in competitive situations and regularly make thoughtful decisions that benefit team performance. Zongyi continues to develop in the swimming pool. To continue to improve, Zongyi should continue to practise diving in with his chin on his chest to ensure a streamline entry. A great year for Zongyi, well done!

English

Zongyi has made excellent progress in English and approaches the subject with interest and increasing confidence. He listens carefully in lessons and contributes thoughtfully to class discussions, often offering sensible interpretations of characters and events. His reading and comprehension skills are outstanding, and he shows a secure understanding of both languages, and meaning within the texts studied. When reading Beowulf, he was able to describe Beowulf as courageous, powerful and determined, and he understood how these qualities made him an admirable heroic figure. He responded well to the themes of bravery and loyalty and could explain how the character's actions shaped the story. Zongyi has also shown a sound understanding of characterisation in Holes. He described the warden effectively, identifying her as controlling, intimidating and manipulative, and he understood the impact she has on the other characters and the setting of the novel. In his written work, he uses a varied vocabulary and is beginning to make increasingly deliberate language choices to add detail and effect. His descriptions are thoughtful and clear. Moving forward Zongyi can develop his confidence when taking part in class discussions.

Class Teacher Comment

It has been an absolute pleasure to teach Zongyi this year. He is a very high-achieving student who consistently applies himself with care, determination and maturity in all that he does. Whatever the task, he always strives to produce his very best piece of work, and this admirable attitude is reflected in the excellent standard he so regularly achieves. He approaches learning with a strong sense of responsibility and quiet ambition, showing that he takes genuine pride in his efforts. Zongyi is thoughtful, conscientious and dependable, and he can always be relied upon to give his full attention and commitment to classroom expectations. Alongside his academic success, Zongyi is a kind and considerate member of the class community. He is helpful to others, a good friend to his peers and, quite simply, a genuinely nice person to have in the classroom. He treats those around him with respect and warmth, and his positive manner contributes greatly to the calm and supportive atmosphere of the class. It has also been lovely to see how much he has grown in confidence over time. He has shown a noticeably more outgoing personality this year, and this developing self-assurance has been a real pleasure to witness. Looking ahead, the next step for Zongyi is to continue pushing himself beyond the classroom and take chances in the wider life of the school. He would have been a wonderful candidate for the Grade 5 Academic Ambassador role, and it is hoped that he will feel encouraged to put himself forward for similar opportunities in future.
